HOW WISCONSIN DID IT.

In view of the many wild and untruthful statements made in regard to the alleged combination or agreement by which the nomination of Mr. Garfield was effected, it may be well to state the exact facts, and thus dissipate all speculation. It is well known to all, that the 28 ballots on Monday closed without any substantial change in the result. Many delegates, realizing that to continue balloting in that way for another day, would necessarily tend to embitter the respective friends of the two leading candidates throughout the country, and thus greatly weaken the party, especially if either of the candidates should be nominated, and hence, felt in duty bound to break the monotony, if possible, by the selection of a new man. Accordingly, about twenty delegates, including Sanderson, Winkler and myself, from this State, met at the Massachusetts headquarters, at the Gardner house, immediately after the adjournment on Monday night. The result of that meeting was that Governor Smith, of Vermont, General Benjamin Harrison, of Indiana, and myself, were appointed a committee to confer with the Blaine and Sherman leaders, and see if anything could be effected. It is enough to say, that Messrs. Hale, Frye and Hamlin, would listen to nothing, except what would result, in what they claimed was certain, the success of their chief on the coming day, although they were pretty plainly told, that it would be difficult to hold their friends from Indiana much longer, and that so far as the committee were advised, they could not get any additional strength. The committee then called upon some of the Sherman leaders. They had no suggestions to make and the interview was soon interrupted by the Blaine leaders calling on the Sherman leaders for a conference, and as it was then midnight, our committee withdrew without hope of effecting anything. As the committee was about to separate, the hope was expressed that we would find it practicable for our respective delegations to act together the next day.

The next morning it was ascertained that nothing was effected by the conference of the Blaine and Sherman leaders. Thereupon, most of the Wisconsin delegates had an informal conference with each other, and the result was that sixteen concluded that, under all the circumstances, the wisest thing for them to do was to unite, sooner or later, and make a break for Garfield, who had become exceedingly popular with the entire Convention, and whose great ability and acknowledged leadership in the House of Representatives for many years, and his integrity of character, had endeared him to the great mass of the Republican party of the nation. On the assembling of the Convention, General Harrison and the supporters of Washburne in the Connecticut, Illinois and New Jersey delegations were formed that unless additional votes were forthcoming for Washburne, Wisconsin would soon break for Garfield. General Harrison, thereupon, expressed very high regard and confidence in General Garfield, and although he made no promises, yet he left us to infer that if Wisconsin broke for Garfield, Indiana would follow as it did. The balloting commenced, and Washburne's friends stood firm. On the 32d and 33d ballots, he got 41 votes—eight more than he had received the previous day. Of these, 12 came from Indiana. When Indiana was called on the 34th ballot, the Washburne vote dropped from 12 to 6, when a portion of the Wisconsin delegation at once determined to break for Garfield, and did. Neither Garfield nor Washburne's friends expected this, and the breaking was forced, because the Blaine and Sherman leaders seemed determined to stand firm to the last for their respective chiefs, and because it was believed that the name of Garfield was so firmly established in the confidence of all, that any reasonable prospect of his nomination, would, at once, break the columns of the entire convention from the first, as was manifest by the cheers which greeted his first appearance, and he steadily grew in favor to the last. The break was successful only because it was in harmony with the judgment of the great mass of those cool headed delegates, who were more desirous of serving their party and their country, than to serve any man.

RE-UNION OF VETERANS

The Veterans Enjoying a Jolly Good Time in Milwaukee.

It is Estimated that Eighty Thousand Visitors are in Attendance.

The Arrival of Generals Grant and Sheridan.

The Militia Companies in Camp Preparing for the Prize Drill.

While the Old Veterans are Enjoying Themselves in and Around the Tented Field.

THE PARADE.

Special to the Gazette.

MILWAUKEE, June 10.—The day opened clear and hot, but before noon there was a clouded sky and a cool breeze from the west. This largely helped in making the great procession a grand success. The four divisions were formed from Division street at ten o'clock, but it was after twelve before the vast column got fairly under way, and then there were numerous interruptions which made the progress of the march quite slow. The sight was indescribably grand. There were over fifty stands of colors, twelve bands of music, twenty-one companies of National Guard, one squadron of cavalry, four companies of cadets and ten thousand veterans. In the rear of the column in carriages were General Grant and Sheridan, Governor Smith and staff and several distinguished visitors. Along the line of march through the principal streets, there was one dense mass of living humanity. The cheers which greeted Grant and Sheridan all along the route were most enthusiastic and almost deafening. No city in the country was ever more densely thronged than in Milwaukee to-day, and no city was ever more lavishly and beautifully decorated. It is estimated that from fifty to seventy-five thousand visitors are here, and though estimates may sometimes be wild, it is regarded as very fair.

In the competitive drill yesterday the Janesville Guards will probably carry off the first prize. The unanimous opinion is that they deserve it.

THE RE-UNION.

MILWAUKEE, June 9.—The unpleasantly moist condition of the weather during this forenoon availed nothing at all to damp the ardor of the multitude of participants in the reunion festivities. Throughout the city and at the camp, the same eagerness of the crowds intent upon a jolly good time in spite of inconvenience, was quite as noticeable when the rain was falling as while the sun was shining.

In the arrival of crowds of visitors during the day, there has not only been no cessation of merriment, but rather an increase, and to-night will witness, at modest estimate, fully 80,000 visitors in the city and at the encampment, who are here to participate in or to witness the soldiers' reunion festival.

The event of the day, to which all other interests and schemes of pleasure-seeking have been made subordinate, has been the arrival shortly before noon of General U. S. Grant and General Phil Sheridan and their parties. The visit of the honored guests, marks to-day the "red letter" day thus far during the reunion festival, and now that the notables are here, the programmes which have been held somewhat in abeyance pending their coming, may be definitely shaped. It is entirely safe to assume that from this time on general interest in the event of the reunion gathering will be at red heat, until Saturday next, when the "good-byes" of the veterans are to be said, the legion of visitors are to separate to their homes, and when Milwaukee will again resume its normal quiet.

A WELCOMING COMMITTEE.

This morning at 7 o'clock, a special train bearing the members of the Milwaukee Mercantile Association and other prominent citizens, left the Union depot for the purpose of meeting Generals Grant and Sheridan.

through the city, while just off the platform were the Light Horse Squadron bent like duty. The squadron presented a very handsome appearance as they stood in line waiting for the train.

The railroad track for two blocks was covered with people, and it was only with the most energetic work that the police could keep the crowd out of danger's way.

ARRIVED.
The train halted and a hush of expectation spread down upon the sea of people. For a moment all was still, then a "Hurrah" at the door of the parlor car was caught up and echoed to the extreme edge of the concourse as the stout frame and genial pleased face of General Grant appeared above the crowd on the car steps.

Cheer after cheer burst from the multitude as the General raised his hat in response to the hearty welcome.

Very deftly the general made his way through the throng to the four-in-hand carriage ready for his use.

GRANT'S ESCORT.

In the same carriage with General Grant were Governor Smith and General Hamilton. The General and Mrs. Grant will be the guests of the latter named gentleman during their stay in Milwaukee.

THE HERO OF WINCHESTER.

As the shout in honor of Grant's reception by the populace died out, and his carriage moved slowly away through the crowd, the bronzed face, grizzled moustache and goatee of Lieutenant General Sheridan appeared in the doorway of the car, the boys of the Twenty-fourth sent up a shout that made the arches ring.

A flush of pleasure mounted to the face of the "Hero of Winchester" as he lifted his hat to the boys, and he too, was spirited rapidly away to his carriage, in which, attended by Messrs. Michael Bond, John Johnston and John R. Goodrich, he was escorted to the residence of Hon. Alexander Mitchell.

GUARD MOUNTING.

Guard mounting at camp took place in headquarters' square at 8 o'clock this morning. To-day's officers are: Captain J. W. Ferguson, officer of the day; Lieutenant S. S. Sweeney, officer of the guard.

The soldiers on guard at headquarters are detailed from all the companies of militia on the ground, and guard duty is performed with all the exactness and style usual with the crack companies.

At nine o'clock several companies turned out for drill preliminary to the competition of this afternoon, and the crowd on the grounds cheered lustily as some particularly fine movements were executed.

THE TROUBLES OF THE COMMISSARY.

Many mutterings of discontent having come to the ears of a Wisconsin reporter regarding the system of meal tickets which has been adopted by the contractors for furnishing rations, the reporter sought out Mr. Warren Swetland, one of the contractors, and from him obtained a statement of the contractors' side of the question.

Mr. Swetland said that the contractors had taken the contract for furnishing 20,000 meals per day, while so far only 5,000 per day had been called for.

"We feel morally certain," said Mr. Swetland, "that we shall lose between $5,000 and $6,000 on our contract."

Yesterday afternoon there were 6,000 veterans encamped on the grounds and a steady stream of them came to the numbers. To-day the number of "vets" in camp will look up over ten thousand.

The arrivals on the several roads coming into Milwaukee to-day up to 2 o'clock this afternoon are about as here reported.

On the St. Paul road 4,000 on the Northwestern road an equal number; on the Wisconsin Central 1,300; on the Milwaukee, Lake Shore & Western 1,200.

All the incoming trains were full and people along the lines had to wait for later trains.

OREGON.

The First Gun of the Great Political Battle is Fired by Oregon.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 9.—A dispatch from Portland says Oregon has gone Republican. M. C. George, Republican, is elected to Congress by about 800 majority.

The three Republican Supreme Judges have average majorities of over 1,000. The Legislature is doubtful, with the chances in favor of the Republicans.

GARFIELD.

The Reception of General Garfield on his Return to Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, O., June 9.—This city was in a fever of excitement when General Garfield arrived. In fact, it has been in that condition ever since news of the nomination was received, and is likely to remain so at least till after the ratification meeting, to-morrow night. There had been no time to get up elaborate decorations, but the people turned out in great numbers and manifested a good deal more than mere curiosity, much of genuine delight over the nomination.

A salute of one hundred guns was fired when the train stopped. The great depot was nearly full of people, and rousing cheers were given for the general as his train entered. In and around the depot there were some five thousand people. Several flags and brass bands were present, and one of the most conspicuous objects was a large transparency, on the four sides of which were:

THE FOLLOWING LEGENDS:
He, who steered a canal-boat at the age of 16, will steer the ship of state at 50.
Ohio's Senator, Ohio's Major General, Ohio's President.

"Sold for the Carpenter President," "the true favorite son of Ohio is the favorite of the nation."

The Reception Committee at once took charge of the General and escorted him through the hurrying crowd to a carriage drawn by four white horses.

CHICAGO, June 10.—Gen. Garfield, with a few friends, left the city yesterday morning for his home in Ohio, taking the Lake Shore road. At every stopping place the train was surrounded by enthusiastic crowds. Gov. Foster and others made brief speeches, but the nominee contented himself with appearing at the rear door of his car and bowing his thanks.

SOFT MONEY.

CHICAGO, June 10.—Two soft-money conventions assembled in this city, yesterday, the national greenback laborers at the Exposition building, and the union greenback laborers at Farwell hall. The first named were about six hundred in number.

Congressman De La Matyr was elected temporary chairman, and made a speech. After the appointment of the usual committees, the memorial of the women suffragists was presented, and Susan B. Anthony was given permission to make a speech, whereupon Kearney left the hall.

The evening session was devoted to speech-making, the committees not being ready to report.

Before adjourning for the night, it was announced that the Farwell hall crowd had concluded to join the larger body at the Exposition building to-day.

RESERVOIRS.

An Adverse Report from the Committee on Commerce.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 9.—Representative Washburne's bill for appropriating $500,000 to build reservoirs at the headwaters of the Mississippi, St. Croix, and Wisconsin rivers, was reported adversely to-day from the Committee of Commerce.

Representative Beale, of Virginia, writes a long and elaborate report accompanying the bill, in which, with all the members of the Committee, he takes ground that the reservoir system cannot in our day be regarded as an experiment, nor is the project to construct reservoirs by dams upon these rivers a new one.

THE DEMOCRACY.

BALTIMORE, June 9.—The Democratic Conservative State Convention to select delegates to the National Convention at Cincinnati and choose Presidential Electors met to-day. The resolutions decline to instruct, but express confidence in the distinguished ability of Thomas Francis Bayard.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 9.—The State Democratic Convention was held to-day. The delegation is reported solid for Field, except one for Bayard and one for Tilden.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 9.—The Indiana Democratic Convention was presided over by ex-Governor Hendricks. After one ballot for Governor, Franklin Landers was nominated by acclamation. The delegates to Cincinnati were instructed for Mr. Hendricks, but it is understood that they are in favor of Seymour's nomination for President, giving Hendricks second place, believing that such a combination would defeat Tilden and, in all probability, triumph at the polls.

IN MEMORIAM.

Unveiling of the Statue Erected to the Memory of Lord Byron.

London Telegraph.

The Byron statue in Hamilton Gardens was unveiled, yesterday, at 1 o'clock, by Lord Houghton, in the presence of a small company. It was a splendid spectacle, in the present, unfinished condition of the pedestal, that the monument should be unveiled without any formal ceremony. Previous to the removal of the drapery from the sitting figure of the noble poet Lord Houghton made the following brief remarks: "I have unveiled to sight of the British people the statue of the great poet of the earlier portion of this century, in the full ripeness of his fame. More than two generations have already delighted in his genius, and it is our happiness to present this monument to the satisfaction of those who are to come. If each memory of his music has been on our ears, a long ago as was tabled in the Egyptian statue by the radiance of the dawn, it is something that the meridian splendor will now awake the emotion and gratitude of future millions of mankind. The generous government of Great Britain will shortly contribute a becoming pedestal of Helicon, emblematic to this imperishable nation of the hero of his independence." Before the brief proceedings closed a cordial vote of thanks was on the motion of Earl Stanhope, passed to Lord Houghton. It was once proposed in both houses of parliament that a statue by Thorwaldsen should be admitted to the Abbey, and at last the promoters of the Byron memorial, to whom we are indebted for this bronze statue by Belt, set to work in earnest, fifty-one years after the poet's death, to take away the reproach that one of the greatest writers of verse and of prose that England has produced within the last century should have no other memorial than the plain tablet of white marble erected by his daughter, Lady Lovelace, in Hocknell church, and the circular medallion upon the house in Holles street, Cavendish square, where he was born. Mr. H. C. Belt has represented the poet as sitting in deep repose, and with the manuscript of "Childe Harold" upon his knee, contemplating from the rock which supports his colossal figure the ocean which was his delight. At his feet crouches the Newfoundland dog, Boatswain, whose epitaph his master could not write without a ding at the human brotherhood and sisters for their "eternal fidelity and constancy. The yachting dress in which the figure is clothed suggests the element upon which the poet's eyes were bent, and the entire absence of affectation in his mien and attitude harmonizes with his well known antipathy to the theatrical attitudes and pretensions of the day. It will, we think, be the general opinion that in this colossal, sitting figure Mr. Belt has surpassed his previous hand work. The wooden pedestal upon which it is temporarily placed will do duty until the arrival in this country of a block of marble hewn from the quarries of the Peloponnese which the Greek government contributes as its testimony to the poet, who, having "dreamed that Greece might still be free," died in his effort to restore her to liberty. But it was meet and fitting that the 43,000 collected for this memorial statue should come from men and women scattered far and wide over the earth who, in Emerson's words "speak the commercial and conquering tongue of England." At last the noble poet is before us, in the land of his birth, as he looked and seemed when in 1818 he was the idol of London society, the cynosure of all eyes.

THE DISTRESS IN IRELAND.

The Duke of Edinburgh Declares that It Has Not Been Exaggerated.

It has been believed by many that the extent of the distress on the west coast of Ireland is greatly exaggerated; that the relief administered has not in all cases been necessary; but I can confidently state, as the result of what I have seen and from an intimate knowledge of how the relief has been granted, that the distress in the main has not been exaggerated. It has been excessively severe, and that it has not reached the point it reached at the time known as the "Irish Famine," is due entirely to the fact that the preparations for meeting it had been taken in time. I can not refrain from expressing my sense of how much that factoring in the duchess of Marlborough. It has been a great pleasure to me to be associated with her grace, as well as with many others, in this beneficent work. We have also to thank the citizens of America for the great and generous help they have sent to Ireland. It was my good fortune to be able to be at Queenstown to assist in the distribution of that magnificent cargo which was sent from America. I must say that the distress is not over yet, nor will it be over for at least two months and a half, when the first crop—the potato crop—will be gathered and is followed by the general harvest. Until then, in many cases, actual relief by feeding the population in some portions of Ireland, including the islands, must be continued. Otherwise the starvation which would have occurred in the first instance but for such relief will occur; yet I hope all those who are here to-day evening will bear in mind, and tell others who are charitably inclined, that the time has not yet passed when such good may be done by sending subscriptions to those great funds which have already done so much to relieve the distress. It is to be hoped, too, that other things may be done, such as the undertaking of great works and the encouragement of the coast fisheries of Ireland. I feel sure that the organizing of the fisheries on the coast, which are at present very much neglected, would give the population there a more secure means of existence. The land is really incapable of supporting the population from natural resources, and I feel certain that, without the assistance of the fisheries, the same distress which has occurred will occur again.
